The butler show aired by WTTG 2/8/70 is a transparent buttering of the man who pays the bills, Frawley. It was entirely on pets, having nothing to do with "ethical revolution" or "conflict management" of being a "square". It has a long sequence showing the sponsor's private zoo (he is not identified as the sponsor who pays for it but as "my enighbor"), with his son interviewed at length, and tries to give a camp tone to the keeping of exotic animals, boring even to animal lovers.
